About the Workshop

Research is an essential component of academic inquiry across all disciplines and Political Science is no exception. Contemporary political and social research requires students to develop a sound understanding of theoretical perspectives, political institutions and the systematic methods through which political and social realities can be investigated, analysed and interpreted.

The proposed Five-Day Research Methodology Workshop for Political Science and Other Social Science Students aims to equip participants with the fundamental knowledge and practical skills necessary to undertake systematic and scientifically grounded research. The workshop will introduce students to the various stages of the research process, including the identification of research problems, formulation of research questions and objectives, review of relevant literature, selection of appropriate research designs and methods, data collection and analysis, interpretation of findings and preparation of research reports.

The programme will adopt a participatory and practice-oriented approach, incorporating expert lectures, interactive discussions, practical exercises, group activities, demonstrations and hands-on research assignments. These activities will enable participants to connect theoretical understanding with practical research applications and develop the skills required to conduct independent academic research.

Furthermore, the workshop will address the major challenges associated with identifying, defining and investigating research problems while familiarising students with appropriate methodological approaches to addressing research questions systematically. By bridging the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical application, the workshop seeks to strengthen students' research aptitude, analytical abilities and academic writing skills, thereby preparing them for future research endeavours and advanced academic pursuits.

The major objectives are:

- To introduce students about social-science research.
- To familiarise students with major approaches and methods of social science research.
- To identify and formulate a research problem.
- To formulate research questions, objectives and hypotheses.
- To develop skills in review of literature.
- To provide practical knowledge on different sampling techniques.
- To prograde the skills in primary and secondary data collection.
- To introduce basic data analysis methods.
- To familiarise the use digital tools for academic research.
- To sensitise students about research ethics, plagiarism, citation etc.
- To develop students' ability to prepare a research proposal and research report preparation.
- To create a research-oriented academic environment among the students.
